

The purpose of this course is to introduce students to the history of the Cold War, which has shaped so much of our current world. Part I of the two-part history looks at the origins of the Cold War and its growing entrenchment in East-West relations; as well as the impact it has had on all aspects of life. No claim to completeness is being made and rather than proceeding strictly in a chronological fashion, the focus will be on selected major events. It will be up to the student to acquaint himself with the intervening developments. It is assumed that students taking this course have a basic understanding of the events of World War II.

The lectures will focus on specific issues and might range beyond the material contained in the textbook. Students are encouraged to consult additional sources of information. The benefit the student will derive from this course will depend very much upon his regular attendance. Each student should feel obliged to keep up-to-date with the course material and to contribute, regularly, to classroom discussions. This requirement is intended to assure students of success in developing their understanding and personal opinions regarding the nature of the issues under discussion.

Students who successfully complete this course, ought to have 1) developed enhanced skills for formal written/oral communication; 2) improved their critical reading skills; 3) improved their skills for critical and analytical thought; 4) honed their understanding of key concepts and terms specific to the course content; and 5) improved skills to prepare a term paper at university transfer level, demonstrating an appropriate mastery of research skills and grammar.

Examinations will be based on assigned readings, lectures and in-class discussions.

TERM PAPERS:

Choose one of the following topics to write on. Essays should be legible and double spaced. It must contain a title page, foot- notes to your sources of information, as well as a bibliography. For proper footnoting and other technical aspects of essay writing, consult the LANGARA STYLE SHEET.

Your paper MUST contain a bibliography of at least six sources (apart from course textbook) that you have used in its preparation. REMEMBER: a term paper requires critical analysis of your subject -- a reading and weighing of points of view advanced by a number of experts in your chosen subject area. A laundry list of facts and generalizations, or a mere recitation of events, does not meet the requirements of critical analysis.

LATE PAPERS WILL BE PENALIZED 10% PER DAY, including Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.
