THE UNSEEN FORCE: THE FILMS OF SAM RAIMI

JOHN KENNETH MUIR

Sam Raimi exploded onto the movie scene with the audacious, independently-produced horror film The Evil Dead. Reigniting the horror genre to such a degree that Wes Craven credited Raimi on-screen in A Nightmare on Elm Street, Raimi went on to direct two Evil Dead sequels, his own comic-book superhero, Darkman, and a post-modern western, The Quick and the Dead. Raimi's influence on other filmmakers continues to be enormous - from the "shaky cam" shots of the Coen brothers to the early oeuvre of The Lord of the Rings director Peter Jackson. In 2002, Raimi's Spider-Man had the biggest opening weekend in history, earning more than $114 million at the box office.

This biography also features a look at Spider-Man 2. Included are first-person accounts and interviews with the cinematographers, producers, screenwriters, actors, special effects magicians and composers who collaborated to make his films the stuff of legend, earn mainstream success and still be the focus of obsessive cult. CAUGHT IN THE WEB: DREAMING UP THE WORLD OF SPIDER-MAN 2

MARK COTTA VAZ

In this journey behind-the-scenes and into the imagination, fans can discover how the myth and magic became real in Spider-Man 2, as they plunge deeper into Spider-Man's world to meet the characters, explore the environments and follow the storyline. Packed with production illustrations, prepared by many of the most talented illustrators in Hollywood, this title features original sketches, artwork and doodles that became the inspirations for characters, sets and computer-generated imagery, climactic scenes from the movie as they first appeared in conceptual art, design work used to develop costumes and visual effects, blueprints and architectural drafts used in the construction of both physical and virtual environments and unique insights into the genesis of Doc Ock.  DARWIN'S CHILDREN

Darwin #2. Stella Nova is one of the 'virus children', a generation of genetically enhanced babies born a dozen years before to mothers infected with the SHEVA virus. In fact, the children represent the next great evolutionary leap and a new species of human, Homo sapiens novus, but this is officially denied. They're gentle, charming and persuasive, possessed of remarkable traits. Nevertheless, they are locked up in special schools, quarantined from society, feared and reviled. 'Survival of the fittest' takes on a new dimension as the children reach puberty. Stella is one of the first to find herself attracted to another 'virus child', but the authorities are watching and waiting for the opportunity to strike the next blow in their escalating war to preserve humankind at any cost.  COUNTERFEIT KINGS

Once a bodyguard for the king of the Io colony, Horrocks now toils in one of the brimstone moon's orbiting Furnaces - a network of processing stations that harvest power from Io's continuous volcanic eruptions. His new job is rough and unglamorous, but with his wife expecting their first child, he wants nothing more to do with the kill-or-be-killed life of a king's bodyguard. His hopes for a stable future are shattered when an assassination attempt kills one of the King's sons and forces the King himself into hiding. Civil war looms as many factions compete for control of the leaderless colony. Called back into service by the Queen, Horrocks agrees to spearhead the King's rescue. Now he must track down the Ringers, a new breed of bodyguard surgically altered to mimic the King, who all vanished moments after the attempted assassination. To make matters worse, his wife insists on joining the hunt, plunging herself and their unborn child into the kind of do-or-die danger he had worked so hard to keep them from. Tp $32.95 382pp

THE WILD REEL

PAUL BRANDON

Tp $32.95 332pp

Brandon has created an urban fantasy tale set between Ireland and Brisbane, Australia, that has some of the charm of a De Lint novel, but with a bit more humour, local flavour and loads of pop culture references.

Natasha (Natty) is a 20-something (Irish) artist. She has received more than a little fame for her stunning paintings, mostly Irish land and seascapes. While she paints, she hears music - from wild Irish jigs to instrumentals. What she doesn't realise is that this is more than a little magic. It is this magic that attracts the attention of Finvarra - the Faerie King of Connaught. Finvarra is in need of a bride by All Hallows Eve - and he's decided that Natty is the woman for him.

Gone are the days when he can just take her to be his bride - she must agree to it, so he starts wooing her by invading her dreams - which start out erotic, but end up somewhere else entirely. It begins to affect not only her sleep, but her work as well. When Natty receives an invitation to attend the wedding of an old friend who is now living in Brisbane, she jumps at the chance, thinking the change of scenery will clear her mind and get rid of the dreams that have started to take on sinister overtones.

Finvarra has dabbled in magic to do an exchange with the Brisbane fairy court (the "Colonials"). Apart from a couple of fairies who will stay in their respective homes to act as guides, the two courts swap. Little does he know that Tu'loch (the last of the great enchantresses of the Old World) has literally hitched a ride to Australia on the tails of his magic. If Finvarra doesn't find a bride in time - she will take control of their home.

Much of the humour of the story comes from the more traditional, rural Irish Court trying to deal with being in the Brisbane CBD (their reaction to cricket made me laugh).

In Brisbane, Natty stays with her best friend Gwendolyn during the weeks leading up to Sarah's wedding. It is through Gwendolyn that she meets and falls for Ally, a musician, folklore expert and all-round nice guy (if I do say so myself). Natty's dreams continue to worsen and she eventually confides in Ally, who then plays in pivotal role in helping her.

As mentioned, this has similarities to a De Lint or Emma Bull novel (that's why I picked it up). It doesn't, however, focus on the coexistence of our world with that of the magical - they just do.

Brandon's style is also grittier, with a bit of a naughty sense of humour at times. There are many different types of magical creatures in the story - from boggles to trolls, fairies to phoukas - and not all of them are nice.

Brian Froud would have been the perfect illustrator for all these peripheral characters. Music, art, magic, a little romance and humour - this was a great story. I did feel one character did something a little convenient at the end (which annoyed me for a few minutes), but it didn't take me long to get over it. Lots of fun. - Stephanie

SONGS OF EARTH AND POWER

GREG BEAR

Pb $19.95 416pp

Songs of Earth and Power is an omnibus edition of two novels originally published separately: The Infinity Concerto and The Serpent Mage. Greg Bear has done his homework, incorporating Gaelic and Celtic cultures into this work, making the story more believable - and his religious, though irreverent, connotations are amusing.

The human race's hero and saviour in this epic is a young man named Michael Perrin, an aspiring poet of 16 years who, after befriendng a famous composer, sets out one evening shortly after the composer's death to discover "what lies between, above or below" his reality and finds himself transported, quite violently, to another dimension - another world - another space in time alternately known as Sidhedark, the land of faerie, or simply, The Realm.

Michael soon finds he must adapt and learn as much as he can about his new surroundings if he is to survive long enough to find his way back to Earth; for The Realm is a harsh and unforgiving place where humans are only tolerated because of a pact between a defeated human sorcerer and the Sidhe, into whose world young Michael Perrin has been thrust.

In part 1 of the epic, The Infinity Concerto, we follow young Michael and his accomplishments and failures in his quest to meet The Isomage, the defeated human sorcerer, who is the only one that has the power to return Michael to Earth. There are many twists and turns in the story and you may find yourself going back to reread certain passages, afraid that you may have missed some crucial piece of information that the story needs to progress.

In part 2, The Serpent Mage, we find Michael Perrin back on Earth five years later (it only seemed like a few month's time while he was in The Realm); vastly more knowledgeable, but still not sure of the potential he must accomplish to become what he has been destined for. The Serpent Mage, Manus is truly a delightful character who, while imparting his knowledge, oft-times unwittingly, to Michael, sheds light on the creation of man and all the original five races of beings.

Although I found The Infinity Concerto to be the stronger of the two books, Bear's ending of The Serpent Mage has left this story satisfyingly complete. The door is still open for the author to, perhaps, one day write a third book featuring Michael and Kristine's daughter. - Adam

The Dreamers #2. Despite the literally earth-shattering climax of The Elder Gods (Pb $19.95), Dahlaine still does not regret having brought the Dreamers into the world of the Elder Gods. He only wishes he'd thought harder about the consequences. His sister Aracia fears the whole world will collapse in on itself if the Dreamers should all wake up and realise where they are. It's bad enough with them dreaming the future, but at least it's a future. The Dreamers give the Elder Gods a chance in the battle against the vicious Ruler of the Wasteland. Then spies of very short stature start cropping up in Veltan's bucolic and peaceful domain. They look like people, or maybe they all look like the same person, but they are more sinister than that. JENNIFER FALLON WOLFBLADE

The Hythrun Chronicles #1. Marla Wolfblade, princess of Hythria, is determined to restore her family to its former power and glory. But Hythria is a fiercely patriarchal society and Marla knows power may only be gained through a man. Narrowly avoiding an arranged marriage to the King of Fardohnya, she instead marries Laran, Warlord of Dregian Province and gives birth to a son. Damir is named heir to the throne of Hythria by his uncle, the dissolute High Prince. Settling in to life as the wife of a warlord, Marla believes the future of her family is secured, but there are forces in the land that do not want the house of Wolfblade restored. Can Marla protect her son and her family and stop the conspirators? Pb $18.95 626pp

ALAN DEAN FOSTER LOST AND FOUND

Not so long ago, Marcus Walker was just another young commodities trader in Chicago, working hard and playing harder. But that's all in the past, part of a reality that vanished when he was tossed aboard a starship bound for deep space. Now instead of being a rich hotshot at the top of the food chain, Walker is just another amusing novelty, part of a cargo of cute aliens from primitive planets destined to be sold as pets to highly advanced populations in civilised regions of the galaxy. Even if he weren't constantly watched by his captors, Walker has few options. After all, there is no escape from a speeding starship. Another man might resign himself to the inevitable and hope to be sold to a kindly owner, but not Walker. He has no intention of admitting defeat, now or ever. In fact, he's only just begun to fight... Hb $49.95 248pp

 WHILE I LIVE

The Ellie Chronicles #01. The town of Wirrawee is emerging from war, slowly, like a flower after a cold snap. Businesses are starting to reopen, the school has commenced classes once again and local farmers are gradually repossessing their land. But it's not the same Australia as before the war. A new nation exists just a few miles away, a new border that separates Australia from its invaders. Or does it? For Ellie Linton, being back on the farm with her parents is what makes the terrible things that happened during the war - the things she, Homer, Lee, Fi and the others had to do - all worthwhile. It's where she belongs. But the war won't let her go. A devastating tragedy shatters any hope she ever had to reclaim her life, or herself. Pb $14.95 300pp

BLIND LAKE

 At Blind Lake, a federal research installation in Minnesota, scientists are using a technology they barely understand to watch everyday life in a city of lobster-like aliens on a distant planet. They can't contact the aliens in any way or understand their language. All they can do is watch. Then, without warning, a military cordon is imposed on the Blind Lake site. All communication with the outside world is cut off. Food and other vital supplies are delivered by remote control. No one knows why. The scientists, nevertheless, go on with their research. Among them are Marguerite Hauser and the man she recently divorced, Raymond Scutter. They continue to work together despite the difficult conditions and the bitterness between them. Ray believes their efforts are doomed; that culture is arbitrary and the aliens will forever be an enigma. Marguerite believes there is a commonality of sentient thought and that our failure to understand is our own ignorance, not a fact of nature. The behaviour of the alien she has been tracking seems to be developing an elusive narrative logic - and she comes to feel that the alien is somehow, impossibly, aware of the project's observers. But her time is running out. Ray is turning hostile, stalking her. The military cordon is tightening. Understanding had better come soon. Pb $15.95 399pp

Despite wacky weather threatening the San Francisco area, life for the Charmed Ones is as normal as ever. Normal, that is, until 11-year-old Tyler Michaels shows up at their door. Tyler, a Firestarter, is on the run from demons. Though the Halliwell sisters have dealt with Tyler before, a glance at the Book of Shadows turns up new, unexpected information about the boy... and the forces for which his magic can be harnessed. WHAT WE'VE BEEN READING

Northern Lights by Philip Pullman (Pb $18.95) is the first book in the bestselling His Dark Materials series and tells the story of Lyra, living at Oxford with her daemon Pantalaimon. While spying on a meeting of the Scholars, she discovers that her Uncle Asriel has been to the frozen north and tells mysterious tales of Dust and a city in the sky. Then children start disappearing, Lyra acquires the Alethiometer and she is on the run from her enemies, heading towards the ice...

This book deserves all the praise it has received (it won both the Carnegie Medal and the Guardian Award). The writing is superb, the story amazing. At the risk of being hunted down, I think this is ten times better than Harry Potter. - David Yarrow by Charles De Lint (Tp $29.00). Cat Midhir is a fantasy writer whose dreams are real and provide inspiration for her novels. But now, for the first time, the dreams have stopped, Cat realises that whatever is stopping the dreams is also hunting her.

This is one of De Lint's earlier novels and, although it's not as good as his recent work, it still has his trademark style and charm, making it hard to put down. Urban fantasy from one of the best. - David

Song of Susannah by Stephen King (Hb $65.00).

The 6th instalment of The Dark Tower series has been released and I couldn't get my hands on it fast enough. I devoured this pretty quickly and have to say that King has delivered another amazing episode in the story of Roland. Full of tension, action (a very cool siege scene) and humour, this novel flowed more smoothly and quickly than The Wolves of the Calla (Hb $65.00), although it wasn't as big. I was expecting more to happen, considering there is only one more book to go. The Dark Tower (Hb $65.00) is due in September and with the cliff-hanger ending of Song of Susannah, it can't come soon enough. - Sian

The Crooked Letter (Books of the Cataclysm #1) by Sean Williams (Pb $18.95) is a prequel to The Books of the Change trilogy and sets out to explain how the world of the previous trilogy came to be. As a huge fan of the previous trilogy, I was really looking forward to this book, but I was disappointed. While the ideas are great and it does answer some questions, I found it rather confusing and lacking the same vibrancy of the earlier series. The best part of the book was the last quarter. Nevertheless, fans of the previous trilogy should enjoy this book and the tale of how magic returns to the world. - Mark Passion (The Ashuak Chronicles #2) by Tony Shillitoe (Pb $18.95), picks up where Blood (Pb $17.95) left off. The author throws the reader back into the crumbling world of the Ashuak Empire. The story continues to chart a course through blood thirsty imperial politics, as Sukaal Vekesk faces hidden enemies to his moderate reign as military governor of Sekesu.

Without a doubt, this second novel in the trilogy is just as exciting as the first. Shana, the legendary Jaru gladiator, though enslaved, continues her plans to avenge her brother's murder. Alwyn, the teacher, learns more of the Dragon Priest's magic than the Dragon Priests know themselves. And all the while, the wheels set in motion by the Great Dragons to find the Genesis Stone and their ancient enemies the Alfwyn, continue to turn towards a brutal climax. I love this series! - Mark
