Background: Counseling by experienced midwives is offered to women with childbirth fear in most obstetric clinics in Sweden, but information about the content of such counseling is lacking. Aim: To study comprehensiveness, content and organization of the midwife-led counseling for childbirth fear in all obstetric clinics in Sweden. Methods: In this cross-sectional study, data were collected using a questionnaire sent to all obstetric clinics in Sweden (n = 45); a total of 43 clinics responded. Supplementary education for midwives and the availability of treatment options varied at the different clinics and were not associated with the size of the clinic. Conclusion: The midwife-led counseling conducted at the different Swedish obstetric clinics showed considerable disparities. Doctors should be prepared to counsel women about the risks of delaying childbirth until after the age of 35, recommend leading obstetricians, responding to a study that shows that the average age at childbirth is continuing to increase. A study group convened by the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists found that the average age at childbirth is rising throughout Europe, with no sign of the trend changing. Stijn Hooren, a policy analyst at the non-profit think tank RAND and a coauthor of the study, looked at population trends in 21st century. Over the past decade, the mean age o

When you choose your caregiver and the place where you will give birth, you will have made the two choices that most affect your birth experience. Besides those, however, other choices also make a big difference. For example, your choice of childbirth classes will influence your feelings of confidence and readiness as you approach the birth and early parenthood. The idea of formal classes to prepare women and their partners for childbirth came to North America in the early 1950s when the work of Grantly Dick-Read, an English obstetrician, became publicized.
