General George Smith Patton Jr. was a celebrated and controversial American general in World War II, famed for his successes in armored warfare against the Germans in 1944-45. His public image of tough-minded courage in battle remains fixed in the popular image of the war. Historians estimate that Patton's Third Army caused an astounding 55% of all of Germany's casualties at the Battle of the Bulge, while Patton's own men suffered only 9% of the losses on our side.
